

Susan Koschel

Currently an Ordinary Member on the 2017/18 Management Committee for the AKA, I would like to confirm my intention to stand for the 2018/19 AKAMC. It is my ongoing intention to put my passion for kinesiology and our industry into action.

Since 2002 I have worked as a registered kinesiology practitioner (currently Level 5). I became a director of Kinesiology Schools Australia in 2009 (RTO 30916) and opened a campus in Hervey Bay. In 2012, I updated my training qualifications to the TAE40110 and became the Compliance Officer for KSA. This role continues to keep me current with government training requirements for our kinesiology industry.

In 2012 I was the AKA RTO Liaison person. From 2012 to 2015 I participated in the review and update of the Health Training Package on the Subject Matter Expert Group (SMEG) for kinesiology. I was a National Committee member for several months in 2014, providing expertise during a time of transition.

I have been an active board member of the AKA Management Committee since October 2016. I am passionate about how our Association is managed and I strive to work ethically, with integrity and passion. I believe the management group must consult, collaborate and invite opinion from the membership, even if the feedback is tough to swallow. My strong communication and leadership skills are useful in the group and team situation. I am keen to continue promoting kinesiology in the community, ensuring that the Australian Kinesiology Association is at the forefront of our industry.
